

THE HELLMAN-HAMMETT PROGRAM

The Hellman-Hammett program was established by Human Rights Watch in 1990, funded by a bequest from writers Lillian Hellman and Dashiell Hammett and aimed at aiding writers in trouble. A committee of prominent American writers, publishers, editors and human rights workers received applications and awarded grants. At first the awards went to literary writers, then the mandate expanded to include human rights activists penalized for their reporting. In recent years, bloggers and other contributors to social media were included. The awards offered a form of protection. Though the grants were small, the money went far in many parts of the world, providing much-needed support for writers and their families. A full list of grantees follows.
